

Robert McDonald

County Building Inspector Certified as Plans Examiner

4-10-91
The Wasatch County Commission announced Monday that Robert McDonald, the county building inspector, has been notified that he has been certified as a Plans Examiner by the International Conference of Building Officials.

According to Commissioner Pete Coleman, 85 percent of those who take the certification test fail it the first time, but McDonald passed on his first try. An employee of Eckhoff Watson and Preator Engineering, which has worked on county projects for a number of years and recently was contracted as the county's engineering firm, said,

"We're darned lucky to have Robert McDonald working for the county." McDonald was hired as the building inspector a little more than a year ago. During that time, he also has been certified as a building inspector, plumbing inspector, mechanical inspector and structural masonry inspector. The county commissioners said they are "pleased to offer the citizens of Wasatch County the services of a well-qualified Building Inspection Department and pleased with the continuing efforts of the building inspector to increase his knowledge and skills."

Robert McDonald

County Building Inspector Certified as Plans Examiner

4-10-91
The Wasatch County Commission announced Monday that Robert McDonald, the county building inspector, has been notified that he has been certified as a Plans Examiner by the International Conference of Building Officials.

According to Commissioner Pete Coleman, 85 percent of those who take the certification test fail it the first time, but McDonald passed on his first try. An employee of Eckhoff Watson and Preator Engineering, which has worked on county projects for a number of years and recently was contracted as the county's engineering firm, said,

"We're darned lucky to have Robert McDonald working for the county." McDonald was hired as the building inspector a little more than a year ago. During that time, he also has been certified as a building inspector, plumbing inspector, mechanical inspector and structural masonry inspector. The county commissioners said they are "pleased to offer the citizens of Wasatch County the services of a well-qualified Building Inspection Department and pleased with the continuing efforts of the building inspector to increase his knowledge and skills."